Friday, and had the trying experience of lying for seventeen hours exposed to shell fire in a shell hole, which was a foot deep in mud, along with half-a-dozen others, one of whom was killed. The exposure brought on another attack of illress, and after being treated in hospital at Etaples he was allowed a week's leave. He had not long been back at the Front again, however, when he contracted broncho-pneumonia. After a short period of sick leave in England he returned to France on October 3rd, and was in the trenches on the Somme on the 6th. Official intimation of his death in action on October 12th was received from the Car Office on Sunday. From a letter which has since been received by his company commander it appears that the late officer was killed whilst gallantly leading his men in an attack. In addition to devoting practically the whole of his spare time to the Volunteer and Terri-torial movement, the late officer was intimately and actively connected with a number of kindred institutions. He took a prominent part in forming the Dewsbury Battalion of the National Reserve, and, throwing himself into the work with his accustomed enthusiasm, he was chiefly responsible for making it one of the strongest battalions in Yorkshire. He was a prominent member, and at one time secretary, of the Dewsbury and District Rifle Club, and also acted as secretary of the recreation club con-nected with the Drill Hall. In recognition of hected with the Drift Hall. In recognition of his untiring services in connection with the club the members presented him with a handsome smoking cabinet in 1910. An "old boy" of Wheelwright Grammar School-which he at-tended from 1894 to 1932-he was prior to the war engaged as a clerk at the Dewsbury branch of the Lancashire and Yorkshire Bank. He took part in the annual shooting competitions or-ganised by the bank, and open to all the officials, and in 1908 he carried off premier honours. He was also a member of the Battalion Shooting Club connected with the 4th K.O.Y.L.I., and a frequent prize winner. Lieut. Watts probably inherited his military instinct from his mother's family. His grandfather on the maternal side, Col. Donald Stewart, was a paymaster in the Artillery, and served as aide-de-camp and deputy assistant adjutantgeneral during the Crimean war; and an uncle, Capt. Donald Stewart, was one of the first adjutants in Dewsbury in the old Volunteer days. One who knew the late officer intimately jutants in Dewsbury in the old volumeer days. One who knew the late officer intimately writes as follows:-"Lieut. Watts stood over six feet, and he was a soldier and a gentleman every inch. His buoyant spirits and pleasing disposition made him a great favourite. He was extremely popular with officers and men alike, and the men of his own company practically worshipped him. He took great pride in his soldierly duties and was very keen in all that pertained to military affairs. The soldiering instinct was strong in him, and those who knew him best are well aware that he has met the death which he would have chosen could he have done so. His happy, boyish face and pleasant ways will be greatly missed by a large circle of friends, who had for him the most genuine and sincere affection."

The following is an extract from the last letter written by the late officer to his mother :--'I am writing this in a front-line trench dug in a hurry by the people who attacked the Bosches the other night. It was an awful morn-ing yesterday, when we marched a few miles from the camp where we were, all through country recently captured from the Germans, to the place where we bivoucked for the remainder of the day. Early in the evening we pushed in to these trenches. We were busy all night conrecting the trenches up, etc., and the Bosch was very busy with his machine guns and artillery, and so were we. I don't know when you will get this, but I will send it at the first opportunity. Things are looking much better out here now, but we have by no means finished." The letter is dated October 9th, but there is a postscript dated October 10th, as follows: "Sending this to-night. Quite well and busy."

lows: "Sending this to-night. Quite well and busy." The following letter from the late officer's company commander has been received by Mr. Stewart Watts :- "Dr. Mr. Watts,-It is my painful duty to have to inform you of the death in action of your brother, Second-Lieut. D. W. S. Watts, of the York and Lancaster Regiment. The battalion had been detailed to take a German trench on the 12th inst., and going over they were met with a most intense artillery and machine-gun fire. Our casualties were very heavy, and both officers of 'A' Company were killed. 'These were your brother and Lieut. D. Vine. 'A' Company is under my command, but on this occasion 1 was acting as second in command and was left behind at the transport. We all wish to extend to you our deepest sympathy in this, your terrible loss. Your brother had previously been with the battalion for a long period, during which time he had proved himself a most gallant and efficient officer. His second stay was lamentably short, but it was long enough to show that his soldierly qualities were in no way impaired. The knowledge that ne did his duty and died whilst gallantly leading his men must be a slight consolation to you in your great trouble. Last night a party went out from here to the spot where your brother fell and found his body and collected various articles of his kit, which you will receive in due course. He will be buried just behind the line. -J. Horlington, Captain."

Donald's maternal grandfather

The painting below shows Donald's grandfather from his mother's family. He is mentioned in the Dewsbury Reporter newspaper article above. Lieut. Col. Donald Stewart was a paymaster in the 92nd (Gordon) Highlanders, Royal Artillery and served as an aide-de-camp and deputy assistant adjutant-general during the Crimean War. He died in Dover age 64 on the 16th May 1876 whilst living at 4 Castle Street.

Note that he is wearing the Gordon tartan in the painting.

Donald's Uncle, Captain Donald Stewart was also in the military and was one of the first adjutants in Dewsbury.
